Petition for a Writ of Certiorari to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit

Petitioners pray that a writ of certiorari issue to review the order and judgment entered in this case on February 1, 1980, by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

OPINIONS BELOW

The order, judgment and opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit, entered February 1, 1980, is set forth in the Appendix, Pg. A-1 and the opinion is reported at 611 F.2d 102. The order of the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas entered on the 9th day of January, 1979 is set forth in the Appendix, Pg. A-8, the decision is not reported.

JURISDICTION

The opinion of the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit was made and entered on February 1, 1980. Petitioners' Motion for Rehearing was denied March 6, 1980. The jurisdiction of this Court is invoked under and pursuant to 28 U.S.C. 1254(1).

QUESTIONS PRESENTED FOR REVIEW

1. Does the "per se rule" as it is applied under the antitrust laws apply to six insurance corporations' concerted refusal to deal (boycott) with Petitioners, a single insurance agency.

2. Does this Court's holdings in Silver v. New York Stock Exchange, 373 U.S. 341, 83 S.Ct. 1246, 10 L.ED.2d 389 (1963) and Klor's Inc. v. Broadway-Hale Stores, Inc., 359 U.S. 207, 79 S.Ct. 705, 3 L.Ed.2d 741 (1959) require that a boycott be on a horizontal level in order to be a per se violation of the Antitrust laws.

3. In regulated industries, such as insurance, does a vertical boycott allow application of the per se rule.

STATUTORY PROVISIONS INVOLVED

This case involves Section I of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. §1 which provides in pertinent part:

> "Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal."

and the McCarran-Ferguson Act, 15 U.S.C. §1013(b) relating to the insurance industry exemption which states as follows:

> "(b) Nothing contained in this chapter shall render the said Sherman Act inapplicable to any agreement to boycott, coerce, or intimidate, or act of boycott, coercion, or intimidation.

STATEMENT OF THE CASE

1. Proceedings in the District Court

This suit was originally filed on February 23, 1977, in the Northern District of Texas. Jurisdiction was asserted by Petitioners pursuant to Title 28 U.S.C., §§1331 and 1337 and Title 15 U.S.C. §§1, 2, 3, 4, 14, 15, 16, 18 and 26 and 1013-b, as an action under the Federal Antitrust Laws (Sherman, Clayton and McCarron-Ferguson Acts) with amounts in controversy exceeding $10,000.00.

The facts of the case are essentially undisputed. Petitioners, Plaintiffs in the Trial Court, were a father and son insurance agency. Crum and Forster is an insurance management corporation. Floyd West & Company is the Texas management corporation for all Respondent Companies; Westchester Fire Insurance Company, The North River Insurance Company, International Insurance Company and Commonwealth County Mutual Ins. Co. had for twelve (12) years contracted with the Petitioners to supply insurance for sale to the public; U. S. Fire Insurance Co. had provided Errors and Omissions coverage for the Petitioners for many years.

In March of 1976 the contract to provide insurance was terminated by the four insurance providers ostensibly over a dispute between Petitioners and North River Insurance Company, one of the providers. Approximately two months later the separate contract with U. S. Fire Insurance Company for Errors and Omissions coverage on Petitioners was terminated.

The District Court granted Respondents' Motion for Summary Judgment, a copy of the Court's opinion appears in the Appendix Pg. A-8, stating that Petitioners' cause of action could not be a per se violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act, and that Petitioners could not prevail under the rule of reason test.

2. The Decision of the Court of Appeals

Petitioners appealed to the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit on the grounds that the District Court erred in holding on Motion for Summary Judgment that as a matter of law the petitioners did not have an antitrust claim.

The Court of Appeals affirmed the judgment of the Trial Court (contained in Appendix Pg. A-1.) basing their opinion on the fact that the boycott was a vertical rather than horizontal boycott and therefore could not be a per se violation, and that there was insufficient evidence under the rule of reason test to sustain Petitioners' cause of action.

REASONS FOR GRANTING THE WRIT

One of the more recent decisions of this Court in the area of boycotts, St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co. v. Barry, 438 U.S. 531, 98 S.Ct. 2923, 57 L.Ed.2d 973 (1978) bears close examination as the similarities between it and the present case are striking. St. Paul sets out that:

> "The generic concept of boycott refers to a method of pressuring a party with whom one has a dispute by withholding, or enlisting others to withhold, patronage or services for the target. at 2930
> This Court has held unlawful concerted refusals to deal in cases where the target is a customer of some or all of the conspirators who is being denied access to a desired good or service because of a refusal to accede to particular terms set by some or all of the sellers. See e.g., Paramount Famous Corp. v. United States, 282 U.S. 30, 51 S.Ct. 42, 75 L.Ed. 145 (1930); United States v. First Nat. Pictures, Inc., 282 U.S. 44, 51 S.Ct. 45, 75 L.Ed. 151 (1930); Binderup v. Pathe Exchange, 263 U.S. 291, 44 S.Ct. 96, 68 L.Ed. 308 (1923). See also Anderson v. Shipowners Assn., 272 U.S. 359, 47 S.Ct. 125, 71 L.Ed. 298 (1926). As the Court put it in Kiefer-Stewart Co. v. Seagram & Sons, 340 U.S. 211, 214, 71 S.Ct. 259, 261, 95 L.Ed. 219 (1951), 'the Sherman Act makes it an offense for [businessmen] to agree among themselves to stop selling to particular customers.'" at 2931.

The applicability of the above to the present case is apparent. Because of a disagreement with one insurance company, i.e., refusal to place a loss on an uninvolved insurance company, five of the Respondent Companies cancelled Petitioners' agency-company contract. Later, Petitioners' Errors and Omissions coverage of long standing was cancelled by a sixth of the Respondent Companies in spite of the fact that it was under a separate contract. Then, Respondents refused to issue an Errors and Omissions policy through the Texas Association of Independent Agents as was their agreement even after Petitioners had been cleared of any wrongdoing in this single dispute with one of the Respondent Companies. These actions put Petitioners out of business.

> "[T]he purpose of the boycott, coercion and intimidation exception [to McCarran-Ferguson] was solely to protect insurance agents or other insurance companies from being 'black listed' by powerful combinations of insurance companies . . ." St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co. v. Barry, 438 U.S. 531, 98 S.Ct. 2923, 57 L.Ed. 2d 932 (1978). Emphasis added)

The Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals points out in their February 1, 1980 opinion that the Supreme Court has required the application of the per se rules to all explicit concerted refusals to deal, citing Silver v. New York Stock Exchange, 373 U.S. 341, 83 S.Ct. 1246, 10 L.Ed.2d 389 (1963) and Klor's Inc. v. Broadway-Hale Stores, Inc., 359 U.S. 207, 79 S.Ct. 705, 3 L.Ed.2d 741 (1959) as supporting authority. However, the Court then differentiates these cases by stating that there was a "horizontal boycott aspect" in the Supreme Court cases not found in the present case (at 104). In this respect Petitioners would show the Court misapplied these holdings to the present case.

Petitioners would show that in Silver, no horizontal conspiracy was involved. Instead, there was an action by an individual stockholder against the New York Stock Exchange for their refusal to allow the petitioners an information "tie-in" to the Stock Exchange. Both the New York Exchange and the individual members of the Exchange, through which the tie-in was accomplished, were supplying a service to, rather than competing directly with, Silver; hence a vertical boycott. This situation is directly analogous to the present case. There is no dispute that all of the Respondent Insurance Companies boycotted Petitioners. As in Silver, this boycott involved suppliers and the party being supplied.

The Fifth Circuit states that the fact that there was a business dispute between North River Insurance Company (one of the six defendants) and the Petitioners "defeats the charge of per se liability," however, the facts are undisputed that all of the Respondent Insurance Companies — each separately incorporated—terminated Petitioners. This termination was without regard to any set procedure and was taken as a concerted action by all of these separate and distinct companies.

Had six distributors of appliances as in Klor's v. Broadway Stores, Inc., 359 U.S. 207, 79 S.Ct. 705, 3 L.Ed.2d 741 (1959) decided to stop selling to one retailer because of a disagreement with one of the distributors, there would be no question that an antitrust violation occurred. How then can the present case be differentiated.

The fact that in Klor's, one out of many defendants was on a horizontal level with the plaintiff, cannot be adopted as a hand-hold to lessen the protection of this Court's prior holdings. In the present case several separate businesses (insurance companies) got together and concertedly refused to deal with a single agent for reasons involving only one of the companies. Klor's states that:

> "Group boycotts, or concerted refusals by traders to deal with other traders, have long been held to be in the forbidden category. They have not been saved by allegations they were reasonable in the specific circumstances, . . ." (at 212) (citations omitted)

Per se violations were described by Justice Black in Northern Pacific Railroad Co. v. United States, 356 U.S. 1, 5, 78 S.Ct. 514, 518, 2 L.Ed.2d 545 (1958) as:

> ". . . agreements or practices which because of their pernicious effect on competition and lack of any redeeming virtue are conclusively presumed to be unreasonable and therefore illegal without elaborate inquiry as to the precise harm they have caused or the business excuse for their use."

A boycott took place in this action. Boycotts fall within those cases which have no redeeming value and are therefore per se violations. The cases cited by the Fifth Circuit as supporting their "horizontal aspect" differentiation do not involve boycott.

In Summary proceedings, as in the present case, the materials lodged on behalf of the movant must be viewed in the light most favorable to the Petitioners (Blackburns). Adickes v. S. H. Kress & Co., 398 U.S. 144, 157, 90 S.Ct. 1598, 1608, 26 L.Ed.2d 142 (1970). Further, this court has said:

> ". . . summary judgment procedures should be used sparingly in complex antitrust litigation where motive and intent play leading roles, the proof is largely in the hands of the alleged conspirators . . ."

Poller v. Columbia Broadcasting Systems, Inc., 368 U.S. 404, 82 S.Ct. 486, 7 L.Ed. 417 (1962) There is no question that a boycott occurred. The regulated industry (insurance) involved in this case relates back to Silver, another regulated industry case, which shows that an even higher degree of care or some procedural safeguards must be shown where separate entities within a self-regulated or state-regulated industry undertake to boycott an individual (at 1259). Where self or state regulation is provided for, and broad exemptions are allowed, conduct falling without these exemptions should be scrutinized carefully. Taking this into account, to allow the use of summary judgment proceeding would be contra to this Court's prior holdings and would effectively deny the protection of the McCarran-Ferguson Act to any insurance agent, the class for whom the act was designed to protect.

CONCLUSION

For the foregoing reasons, it is respectfully submitted that the petition for certiorari should be granted to review the order, judgment and opinion entered on February 1, 1980 by the United States Court of Appeals for the Fifth Circuit.

Respectfully submitted,

CRUM & FORSTER et al,
Defendants-Appellees.

No. 79-1648.

United States Court of Appeals,
Fifth Circuit.

Feb. 1, 1980.

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of Texas.

Before GOLDBERG, FAY and ANDERSON, Circuit Judges.

FAY, Circuit Judge:

Appellant insurance agents, W. W. Blackburn and Jerry Blackburn, challenge an adverse summary judgment in their suit charging the insurer appellees with a concerted refusal to deal violative of section 1 of the Sherman Act, 15 U.S.C. § (1976).[1] We agree with the trial judge that the record evidence, garnered in nearly two years of discovery and presented at the summary judgment, utterly fails to establish the rudimentary elements of an unlawful group boycott. Overcoming a conceded judicial reluctance to approve summary disposition of antitrust actions, we affirm the judgment of the district court.

[1] During oral argument appellants' counsel conceded that 15 U.S.C. §2 (1976) has no place in this litigation, although monopolization attempts violative of §2 had been alleged. As pertinent to this appeal, 15 U.S.C. §1 (1976) provides:

> Every contract, combination in the form of trust or otherwise, or conspiracy, in restraint of trade or commerce among the several States, or with foreign nations, is declared to be illegal . . .

From April, 1970, to April, 1976, the Blackburns were independent insurance agents for appellee insurance companies. The insurers, affiliated through their common holding company and co-appellee Crum & Forster, refused to sell insurance through the Blackburns after a serious business dispute between appellee North River Insurance Company and the agents. Additionally, appellee U.S. Fire Insurance Company, also part of Crum & Forster's holdings, refused to provide the Blackburns with Errors and Omissions insurance, which protects insurance agents from liability to insureds for mistakes and unwarranted delay in issuing policies. Because the Blackburns' agency contract was cancelled for fraud, other insurance companies were reluctant to use them as their agents. Eventually, the Blackburns sold their deteriorating business.

The rift in the parties' previously amicable business relationship occurred when a warehouse burned while its insurance coverage was being transferred from a competing insurer, The Hartford Company, to the appellee insurer North River Insurance Company. North River claimed that without any prior authority the agents issued an insurance policy shortly after the warehouse burned. Asserting that it never received from the agents any verbal or written request for coverage, North River refused to pay the claim and cancelled the agency contract, alleging fraud. The Blackburns, however, argued that North River had given verbal permission to issue a policy, with protection effective from November 1, 1975. They further claimed that they issued a binder[2] and mailed copies to North River, destroying their own copies of the binder when they issued the policy, as was customary. Thus, the Blackburns had no tangible evidence of the verbal permission which North River claimed never to have granted.

From this legitimate business conflict[3] spring the Blackburns' antitrust charges. The Blackburns believed that the root of the insurers' discontent was not the alleged fraud, but rather the diminishing proportion of the agents' insurance business that the insurers had been enjoying. According to the Blackburns, the insurers terminated the agency contract and cancelled the Errors and Omissions policy not only to prevent the agents from serving other insurance companies but also to make an example of the Blackburns that would deter other independent agents from serving the insurers' competitors. Consequently, the Blackburns filed suit, alleging an illegal group boycott by Crum & Forster and its insurance companies. They appeal from summary judgment for the insurers.

[2] An insurance binder is a memorandum of the insurance coverage agreement. It extends protection to the insured pending issuance of the policy, while the insurer is investigating the risks and setting appropriate premium rates. See Black's Law Dictionary 213 (4th ed. 1957).

[3] Litigation of the contractural dispute is pending in the Texas courts. We express no opinion regarding the merits of those separate issues.

[1] Although the McCarran-Ferguson Act, 15 U.S.C. §§ 1011-1015 (1976), exempts the insurance industry from the antitrust laws, section 3(b) of the Act, id. § 1013(b), re-erects against insurance companies the antitrust barriers to anticompetitive group boycotts.[4] St. Paul Fire & Marine Insurance Co. v. Barry, 438 U.S. 531, 541, 98 S.Ct. 2923, 57 L.Ed.2d 932 (1978). To ascertain whether the insurers in this case transgressed those strictures, we initially consider whether their conduct is per se illegal. We review the record evidence in the light most favorable to the appellant agents. See Response of Carolina, Inc. v. Leasco Response, Inc., 537 F.2d 1307, 1319 (5th Cir. 1976). Clearly, related insurance companies and their holding company could wage an unlawful group boycott. Perma Life Mufflers, Inc. v. International Parts Corp., 392 U.S. 134, 141-42, 88 S.Ct. 1981, 20 L.Ed.2d 982 (1968) (holding that common ownership of separate corporations does not preclude suit under the antitrust laws); Columbia Metal Culvert Co. v. Kaiser Aluminum & Chemical Corp., 579 F.2d 20, 34 n.49 (5th Cir.), cert. denied, 439 U.S. 876, 99 S.Ct. 214, 58 L.Ed.2d 190 (1978) (similar).

It is true that certain Supreme Court boycott cases can be read broadly to require the application of the per se rule to all explicit concerted refusals to deal. See, e.g., Silver v. New York Stock Exchange, 373 U.S. 341, 83 S.Ct. 1246, 10 L.Ed.2d 389 (1963);

[4] 15 U.S.C. §1013(b) provides:

Nothing contained in this chapter shall render the said Sherman Act inapplicable to any agreement to boycott, coerce, or intimidate, or act of boycott, coercion, or intimidation.

Klor's Inc. v. Broadway-Hale Stores, Inc. 359 U.S. 207, 79 S.Ct. 705, 3 L.Ed.2d 741 (1959). Such an expansive reading may truy be proper in cases like those before the Supreme Court in which the plaintiff, the excluded party, is on the same competitive level with one member of the conspiracy. In other words, in such cases it may be proper to infer anti-competitive motive and effect because the conspiracy had a horizontal aspect.

[2, 3] This case, however, provides a sharp contrast. All members of the supposed conspiracy are suppliers of insurance. None competes with the plaintiff, an insurance broker. Accordingly, this case contains no horizontal aspect, but involves only a vertical action undertaken by suppliers, the insurance company defendants, against their agent, the insurance broker plaintiff. The per se rule is therefore inapplicable, and the plaintiff must prove that the defendants acted with an anticompetitive motive. See, e. g., Cernuto, Inc. v. United Cabinet Corp., 595 F.2d 164, 168 (3d Cir. 1979); Marquis v. Chrysler Corp., 577 F.2d 624, 640 (9th Cir. 1978); Southern Distributing Co., Inc. v. Southdown, Inc., 574 F.2d 824 (5th Cir. 1978); E. A. McQuade Tours, Inc. v. Consolidated Air Tour Manual Committee, 467 F.2d 178 (5th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1109, 93 S.Ct. 912, 34 L.Ed.2d 690 (1973). The Blackburns' evidence, however, yields inadequate proof of the insurers' intentional attempts to circumscribe competition among independent insurance agents or among its competitors. See E. A. McQuade Tours, Inc. v. Consolidated Air Tour Manual

Committee, 467 F.2d at 187. After nearly two years of discovery, the Blackburns produced no more than their own uncorroborated allegations that the insurers cooperated either to punish the Blackburns for serving other insurance companies or to make an example of the agents that would deter other independent agents from serving the insurors' competitors. Moreover, evidence of the parties' legitimate business dispute defeats the charge of anticompetitive animus. Absent some malevolent intent, the insurers' conduct cannot be labelled per se illegal. See id.

[4] Having cleared the first hurdle of the antitrust barriers, the insurers' refusal to deal next must pass muster under the rule of reason. See id. at 185, 188. Again we find nothing in the record to indicate an unreasonable restraint of trade. The insurers chose to sever their relationship with agents whose actions they deemed fraudulent. The decision by U.S. Fire Insurance Company to terminate the Errors and Omissions policy denotes only the company's resolution not to protect agents whose alleged faulty records or fraudulent proclivities would subject the insurer to frequent claims or litigation. We need not resolve the contractual controversy to preceive that such a dispute would permit reasonable insurers to terminate a relationship with their agents.

We acknowledge that the events surrounding the parties' dispute engender many issues of material fact. Resolution of those issues, however, is not for a federal forum. Notwithstanding the rule circumscribing summary disposition of antitrust cases, the trial court's ruling in this case accurately reflects the paucity of "significant probative evidence" bolstering the agents' allegation of illegal group boycott. See Aladdin Oil Co. v. Texaco, Inc., 603 F.2d 1107, 1110-12 (5th Cir. 1979); Solomon v. Houston Corrugated Box Co., 526 F.2d 389, 393-94 (5th Cir. 1976). Accordingly, that judgment is AFFIRMED.

ORDER

Came on for consideration defendants' motion for summary judgment. Having reviewed the briefs and considered the arguments of counsel and the testimony presented at the hearing of this motion on October 25, 1978, the court is of the opinion that defendants' motion should be granted.

Plaintiffs allege that defendants have engaged in a group boycott, a per se violation of §1 of the Sherman Antitrust Act. They rely upon E. A. McQuade

Tours, Inc. v. Consolidated Air Tour Manual Committee, 467 F.2d 178, 187 (5th Cir. 1972), cert. denied, 409 U.S. 1109 (1973) which summarized the concept of "group boycott" by describing three categories into which the cases have placed the concept. The third category includes "combinations designed to influence coercively the trade practices of boycott victims, rather than to eliminate them as competitors." Plaintiffs contend that their suit falls within this third category because defendants combined to destroy their insurance agency in retaliation for writing increasingly higher dollar amounts of insurance for a competitor. Even assuming that plaintiffs have made out a fact issue as to this proposition, the court finds that they have not presented sufficient evidence to support submission to the jury of the question whether defendants' conduct constitutes a "group boycott."

McQuade's categorizations must be read in the light of the cases underlying them and the purpose of the per se doctrine. The leading case in the third category, Fashion Originators Guild of America v. FTC, 312 U.S. 457 (1941) involved an elaborate scheme by a group of original dress designers to coerce retailers into refusing to deal with competing suppliers who had "pirated" their designs. The per se rule applies to "group boycotts" because they always harm competition and any offsetting benefit can be achieved by means less harmful to competition. Sullivan, ANTITRUST, §85 at 240 (1977). Care should be taken, therefore, not to classify conduct which fits the form of a boycott but which does not have the substantive effect on competition of a classic boycott as a "group boycott" deserving per se treatment. Id. at §90, at 256. In McQuade, the Fifth Circuit stated that "resort to the per se rule is justified only when the presence of exclusionary or coercive conduct warrants the view that the arrangement in question is a "naked restrait of trade." McQuade, supra, 467 F.2d at 178.

This action must fail, as did McQuade, because plaintiffs can not show that defendants sought to achieve some anticompetitive goal by conduct adverse to them. By terminating plaintiffs, defendants did not restrain competition with other insurance companies, but rather, compelled plaintiffs to seek representation of their competitors. There is no evidence that defendants used or contemplated plaintiffs' termination as an example of what might befall independent agents who did too much business for insurance companies outside their group.

Plaintiffs mainly complain that the way in which defendants chose to terminate them — for fraud — coupled with the termination of their errors and omissions coverage by defendant U. S. Fire Insurance Company was designed to put them out of business. They do not show, however, how defendants could have improved its competitive position by their termination. The court can only speculate, without factual basis, that defendants had the unlikely motive of restraining competition with other insurance companies by keeping plaintiffs from representing them. Plaintiff Jerry Blackburn testified to the contrary that other insurance companies were not taking on new agents when the Blackburn agency was terminated. Jerry Blackburn Deposition at 160. Further, there is again no evidence that defendants used or contemplated the adverse actions taken against plaintiffs as a threat against other agents representing them.

This case is far removed from Fashion Originators Guild of America, supra. Plaintiffs' complaint that defendants combined to destroy their business does not make out a per se violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act. The court further finds that, as a matter of law, plaintiffs cannot prevail under the rule of reason because there is insufficient evidence of an anticompetitive motive and impact.

Defendants' moton is granted.
It is so ORDERED.
Dated this 9th day of January, 1979.
